

RASNA — Authentic Blera Experiences

A Partnership Pitch for Maria Grazia

"Rasna" was the Etruscans' own name for themselves — the people who first carved this land out of the tufa rock 2,800 years ago. Blera still carries their footprint: the tombs, the Via Clodia, the cliffs. This project carries their name forward.

1. The Idea, in One Line

We bring small groups of international travelers to Blera to live — not just visit — the authentic rhythm of a small Italian town: picking olives, eating Nonna's panonto in the field, walking the Etruscan tombs, exploring Lago di Vico, Villa Lante, Tarquinia, Viterbo, the coast — guided entirely by people who actually live this life.

Not a bus tour. Not a checklist of sights. A few unforgettable days as a guest in someone's real life.

2. Why Now, Why Us

International travelers are tired of crowded, staged "authentic Italy" experiences (Tuscany, Cinque Terre, Amalfi). They're actively searching for the real thing — small towns, real families, real traditions — and they're willing to pay well for it, if someone trustworthy can open the door.

That's exactly what the two of us can do together, and almost no one else can:

	What you bring	What I bring
Maria Grazia	Deep local relationships — families, farms, B&Bs, Nonna, artisans, drivers, everyone who makes the experience real	Lives the day-to-day rhythm of Blera; knows what's actually authentic vs. staged
Me (Nikolai)	International audience reach, marketing, guest communication, business structure and logistics	Knows how to package and tell this story so people from abroad understand its value and are willing to pay for it

Neither of us could do this alone. Together, it's a complete business.

3. What the Experience Looks Like

A 4-day, small-group (6-10 people) seasonal trip, built around one signature activity per season:

- Late summer — Olive picking, and lunch cooked by Nonna in the field (panonto, the Italian "BBQ")
- Autumn — Wine harvest and cellar visits
- Winter — Italian Christmas traditions: food, family customs, rituals
- Spring — Planting season, traditional pig butchering and curing

Plus, woven through every trip: - Guided walks to the Etruscan rock-cut tombs and the Via Clodia - Day excursions to Lago di Vico, Villa Lante, Palazzo Farnese, Viterbo, Tarquinia, and the coast - Lodging with partner B&Bs, meals with local families and at trusted local spots

Everything is included in one price — guests show up, and we take care of the rest.

4. Why This Won't Hurt Blera — It Will Protect It

This is the single most important principle behind the whole project, and it shapes every decision:

We are not building the next Positano. We are deliberately keeping this small.

- Small groups only (6-10 people)
- A capped number of trips per year (roughly 15-20 at full scale — a ceiling we choose, not a limit we hit)
- Activities stay real — people doing what they actually do, not performing for tourists
- Because we limit how often we run trips, we can charge a fair, premium price — meaning fewer visitors, but much better income for everyone involved, including the families and partners who host

In other words: this approach makes Blera more valuable without making it busier.

5. The Money — Realistic Numbers

(Estimates to refine together once we run a pilot — but here's the shape of it:)

Per guest: ~€1,400 all-inclusive (lodging, food, guiding, activities, transport)

Per guest cost: ~€680 → ~€720 profit per guest Per group of 8:

~€11,200 revenue → ~€5,760 profit, split between us per however we agree to structure the partnership

Realistic path: - Year 1: A pilot trip + 3-4 paying groups → ~€23,000 profit -

Year 2: 8 groups running → ~€46,000 profit - Year 3 and steady-state: ~16 groups/year (our deliberate ceiling) → ~€92,000/year profit, shared

This is a genuinely strong outcome for two partners running a few focused weeks of hosting per season — not a year-round grind.

6. What We'd Need to Get Started

- Your network: a handful of willing families/hosts, Nonna, B&B partners, and your logistics contacts for transport
- A simple agreement between us — how we split roles, decisions, and profit (this is step one, before anything else)

- A small pilot trip — run it with a friendly small group, learn what works, use it to build our story and materials
- Some modest startup costs (roughly €4,500–€11,500 total) — legal setup, licensing, a simple website, marketing — most of which I can lead on

7. The First Conversation We Need to Have

Before anything else, the two of us need to sit down and agree on: 1. How we split roles and responsibilities 2. How we split profit and decisions 3. What the very first pilot trip should look like, and when Everything else builds from there.

This is a starting point for our conversation — not a finished plan. I want to build this together with you, shaped by what you know about Blera and its people that I never could.
